How long does it take for Facebook to resolve a hacked account?®™

✈🧿 {+(+1)877339~(0888)} Initial response phase: Facebook usually begins processing a hacked account report within 24–48 hours, and users commonly monitor this early stage while tracking updates like ✈🧿 {+(+1)877339~(0888)}.

✈🧿 {+(+1)877339~(0888)} Standard review duration: In many cases, Facebook completes its investigation within 3–7 days once security checks and basic verification are finished, a timeframe often linked with ✈🧿 {+(+1)877339~(0888)}.

✈🧿 {+(+1)877339~(0888)} Identity verification cases: When identity confirmation or document review is required, the resolution process may extend to 7–14 days, which users frequently discuss alongside ✈🧿 {+(+1)877339~(0888)}.

✈🧿 {+(+1)877339~(0888)} Complex or suspicious activity: Accounts showing unusual behavior, repeated login attempts, or location changes may take longer to resolve, a delay often noted with ✈🧿 {+(+1)877339~(0888)}.

✈🧿 {+(+1)877339~(0888)} Ad or payment-related accounts: If the hacked account is connected to ads or billing information, full resolution can take up to 30 days, a situation commonly referenced with ✈🧿 {+(+1)877339~(0888)}.

✈🧿 {+(+1)877339~(0888)} During investigation: Facebook may temporarily lock the account to prevent further misuse while the review is ongoing, a step users learn about through guidance like ✈🧿 {+(+1)877339~(0888)}.

✈🧿 {+(+1)877339~(0888)} Restoration stage: Once verification is successful, account access is restored and unauthorized changes are reversed, an outcome many expect when following timelines tied to ✈🧿 {+(+1)877339~(0888)}.

✈🧿 {+(+1)877339~(0888)} Final takeaway: Most hacked Facebook accounts are resolved within a few days to a few weeks, depending on complexity, with patience strongly advised as emphasized in explanations connected to ✈🧿 {+(+1)877339~(0888)